Django

Series 1 Episode 5 and 6

Set in Texas in the late 1800s, Django is a jaded cowboy in search of the daughter he thought he'd lost. In following her trail, he comes upon New Babylon, a town at the bottom of a crater, where all outcasts are welcome and where everyone is equal and free. Here, Django discovers that his 20-year-old daughter Sarah is alive and set to marry John Ellis, the founder of New Babylon. Sarah - who blames her father for the death of their family, massacred many years earlier while he was at war - wants Django to leave. But he refuses to give up and does everything in his power to get a second chance with her, becoming a valuable ally for Ellis, who must defend the town from Elizabeth Thurman's attacks. Unbeknownst to them, Django, John, and Sarah are linked by a web of secrets and a dark past bound to resurface.

U-Boat Wargamers

Episode Four: The Game

Roberts and Laidlaw have uncovered a fatal flaw in the Royal Navy's existing anti-U-boat tactic 'Buttercup'. By wargaming different scenarios, they develop a countertactic of their own, codenamed 'Raspberry', in which a merchant convoy escorted by Royal Navy destroyers can lure in the wolfpack before surrounding and destroying it; in effect, playing the enemy at its own game. But the team now face an uphill battle to try to convince Noble and his colleagues at the Admiralty that they hold the key to stopping the U-boats in the Atlantic.

Womens Super League

Having fallen one point short of glory in 2021/22, Arsenal came into this season as one of the favourites for the title and have been involved in a thrilling four-way battle with Manchester City, Manchester United and Chelsea for the top spot. This Sunday night match, live on Sky Sports, will have their supporters expecting three points to maintain that ambition. Their opponents finished eighth last season, but are already in double figures for defeats this season and are languishing near the foot of the table. Can they spring a surprise in London against Jonas Eidevall's side?

EFL Championship

The Sky Bet Championship is reaching the business end of the season with automatic promotion and play-off spots all on the line in the final weeks. Sunderland know all about the joy of promotion, having climbed out of Sky Bet League One last term following a 2-0 play-off final victory over Wycombe Wanderers at Wembley Stadium in May. Their supporters are hoping for similar success this season and a return to the Premier League for the first time since 2017. The same can be said for Sheffield United, who finished bottom of the Premier League in 2021 and suffered play-off heartache against Nottingham Forest last season.

Netball Super League

The Netball Super League is back on Sky Sports once again in the 2023 season with a new weekly Friday night slot. Every week, a 15-minute hype show on social media with exclusive access to players and behind-the-scenes footage will lead into Sky Sports' main channel build-up and analysis. The round seven selection for Friday Night Netball sees Strathclyde Sirens, who finished eighth in 2022, taking on Saracens Mavericks. The away side have reached the Grand Final a record-equalling seven times, but have gone 13 years since their last title. They have finished just outside the top four in the last two years and hope for improvement in 2023.

Rugby Super League

After four Grand Final wins in a row, there's little doubt that St Helens are the team to beat in the Betfred Super League this year. They started the 28th Super League season once again as the favourites, albeit with a new man at the helm. Three-time champion coach Kristian Woolf has departed for pastures new in the NRL, with club icon Paul Wellens earning the chance to lead his hometown club. He leads his side into a Friday night match on Sky Sports against a Hull FC side who finished ninth in the regular season in 2022.
